Junction City Scandinavian FESTIVAL & CULTURE

Festival Park Stage Restoration

<https://donorbox.org/stage-renovation-project?>

Built in the early 1970s, the stage now requires major foundation repairs. The Scandinavian Cultural Foundation (SCF) is embarking on an ambitious and vital mission: to rebuild and revitalize the Festival Park Stage, adding a protective cover that will extend its use beyond the summer season and into the rest of the year. By investing in this project, you're helping preserve cultural heritage, support youth education, and build a stronger, more connected community. The project is expected to take 3–5 years, with phase one breaking ground in late summer 2026. Now through December 31, all donations to the Festival Park Stage will be matched dollar for dollar, up to $50,000! The Scandinavian Cultural Foundation is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, and all donations are tax-deductible.

Rent Monies

Jean & Candice shared a table with Ed Amundson at the Sons of Norway Holiday Fair where he shared how the Church is planning to use the “rent” money AMW #52 donates to them. They will be grading & graveling the parking area (where we park for meetings)! How nice & useful is that!

It is cooperating with the Nordmansforbundet (established 1905 to keep Norwegians in America in touch with Norway, following Norway's independence from Sweden, in 1905). They share offices downtown Oslo.

Norgesskolen for children and teens in Norway, is well thought of. I just found out they have connections with Langara College in Canada. I was office manager in Norway-America Association, helping them update to new computing (straight out of Norsk Data AS, Norway's largest computer company), before returning to academia.

Ingeborg Lodge #43

in Stanwood Washington was founded in 2003. They meet the 2nd Saturday of the month at 10am at the Sons of Norway hall. They do not meet in July or August. They participate in two parades a year (Fourth of July and at the County Fair), and helped with a Nordic Ancestry exhibit at the local historical society. Every year they hold a Nordic Fair at the fairgrounds, and a few fundraisers to support local organizations. Between meetings, they have hardanger and rosemaling workshops, book clubs, cooking groups and Norwegian language classes.

Lodge Name

Ingeborg is a common female name found in Scandinavian history and mythology. There was an Ingeborg lodge that disbanded, and the new lodge in Washington decided to revive the name. The previous lodge's regalia was gifted to the newer lodge. Ingeborg of Norway (1301-1361) was the only legitimate daughter of King Håkon V of Norway. Her son Magnus VII became King of Norway and Sweden at age 3, so Ingeborg held the title of regent. Ingeborg herself had a slightly scandalous life, and the controversy around her second marriage and her son's claim to the Norwegian throne are part of the 3 novel series Kristin Lavransdatter.

Norwegian tale for New Years Eve

Here's a Norwegian tale for you on the last eve of the year.

According to folklore, New Years Eve was the only chance in the year to learn how to play the fiddle from "fossegrimen", a water spirit or troll in Scandinavian folklore who is neither good nor evil. He plays the fiddle, more specifically the Hardanger fiddle.

In exchange for him teaching you to play, however, he wanted a sacrificial animal - a leg of lamb for instance, that were to be placed by the mill by the waterfall.

Just at midnight, fossegrimen arrived and grabbed the meat and exchanged it for a fiddle. The fiddle was exactly the same quality as the meat the was left. If the meat was bad, the fiddle would also play badly. The more fat on the meat, the better the fiddler you became.

There are several stories about how fossegrimen would be dissatisfied and would exercise revenge. In some case, he would only teach you how to play the fiddle, but not to tune it, which caused huge problems.

Other popular old beliefs around New Years Eve?

Never be seated 13 people at the table, that would result in a bad upcoming year. And never clear the dinner table, but leave it for the following morning.

Also, if the sky had plenty of stars on this evening, it would be a particularly good year for cloudberryes.

Let's hope for a starry night tonight - have a great New Years everyone!!

NORWAY IS GOING TO THE WORLD CUP!

Crown Prince Haakon and Prince Sverre Magnus were in place when Norway secured the World Cup spot with an incredible 4-1 victory over Italy.

A good follow up to our national birds last month would be national animals. Like the birds some are official some are not. Some countries have more than one or different categories. Iceland has only the one the Grylfalcon, which we covered last month with birds. So this month we will cover Greenland, Denmark's territory.

US- AMERICAN BISON

The American bison or buffalo became the official national animal in May 2016 to represent our heritage & for the connection to the native Americans. They are native & once had a population of millions. In the 1800s there were only a few hundred left. President Theodore Roosevelt went to hunt the bison & ended up forming the American Bison Society to save them instead. Today there are close to 10,000 that live in all 50 states, the largest population in Yellowstone National Park. They are herbivores that are unpredictable, social, intelligent, & resilient. Usually 30-70lbs at birth, the males grow to be about 2000 & the females 1000 lbs, yet they can run up to 40 mph & jump as high as six feet. They usually live 10-20 years.

SWEDEN-EURASIAN ELK (MOOSE)

The Eurasian elk is native to Sweden, which has the densest population in the world. It symbolizes the wild & majestic natural areas of Sweden. Calves weigh between 22-33lbs. Bulls can grow up to be as much as 1875 lbs & cows up to 793lbs. Their average lifespan is about 25 years. They're herbivores, eating leaves, shrubs, twigs & when food is scarce in the winter they often eat the pine needles & bark of trees. Only the males have antlers which they shed every year & regrow in the spring. The antlers can spread as much as 6 ft. They have poor eyesight, but they are good swimmers, being able swim 10 miles at a time & dive as much as 15 feet. They can run up to 35 mph!

DENMARK-RED SQUIRREL

The Red Squirrel is a common rodent native to Denmark that lives in the forests, & are especially populous in Jutland. They're tree dwellers, who were chosen from the Norse myth about Ratatoskr, who ran up & down The World Tree with messages & gossip from the eagle at the top to the serpent at the roots. They're small, usually around 9 inches with about an 8 in. tail. They eat seeds, fungi, nuts, eggs, flowers, & vegetables. Their life span is typically 7-12 years, although 85% don't survive their first winter, & have a survival rate of about 50% in the following years.

FINLAND-BROWN BEAR

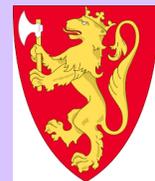

Finland actually touts 5 national animals. Including an animal, bird, fish, insect, & butterfly. The brown bear beat the seal in a vote in 1985. Brown bears are native to Finland & is the largest predator in Europe. It was chosen for its strength & courage. Females weigh 220-660lbs with the males weighing in between 130-440lbs. They are omnivores that hibernate from October-April. They usually live about 20-30 years. They are nocturnal and most active & observable on summer nights. They actually have bear watching vacations available.

GREENLAND-POLAR BEAR

Greenland's national animal is actually on their coat of arms which depicts an upright polar bear on a blue shield. They are the largest & most carnivorous of bears. Weighing just about a pound & a half at birth the males can be over 1700 & the females over 800 lbs. as adults. They spend 50% of their time hunting but with only a 2% success rate. Their preferred food is seal. Because of the amount of time they spend on the ice & in the water they are classified as marine mammals, just like whales. They can smell prey nearly 20 miles away. They have webbed feet which makes them very strong swimmers. They are on the vulnerable list because of lost habitat due to climate change.

NORWAY-LION

Norway is a little different, it has a royal national animal which is also on their coat of arms as a symbol of authority. It represents both the king & the country. The lion stands for courage, strength & nobility. It's a gold lion standing on his back legs on a red background wearing a crown and holding a golden ax with a silver blade. There are no lions in Norway now, but there is evidence that there were once cave lions. They were carnivores that can run up to 50 mph. The females did most of the hunting. Their roar could be heard 5 miles away. They are also on the vulnerable list due to poaching. Norway is one of 21 countries to have the lion as its national animal. Much of the population consider the Eurasian elk the national animal. 6

Culture (Kultur)

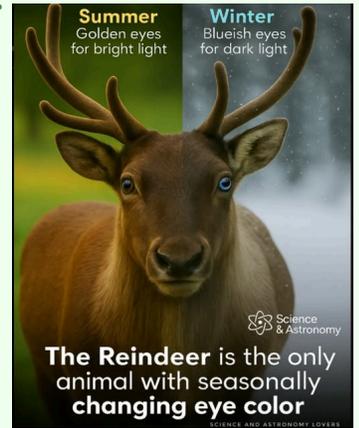

Nov. 1 is Lutfiskens Dag in Sweden
Dec. 9 in Minnesota

This is a dish that's served across the Nordic countries and parts of North America where those immigrants typically settled. It is called lutefisk (in Norwegian) or lutfisk (in Swedish), ludefisk (in Danish), and lipeäkala (in Finnish) See Check it Out on pg. 2.

Reindeer

Reindeer are the only mammals on Earth with seasonally changing eye color — a truly unique Arctic adaptation. In the endless daylight of summer, their eyes appear golden, reflecting light in a way that reduces glare and helps them see clearly across the tundra. When winter sets in, the story changes — their eyes turn a shimmering blue. This shift happens because their pupils stay wide open for months in the dark, increasing eye pressure and altering the way light bounces inside. The result? Their vision becomes up to 1,000 times more sensitive, allowing them to spot predators, find food, and navigate the polar night. This transformation is controlled by the tapetum lucidum — the reflective layer behind the retina that gives many animals “shiny eyes” at night. But in reindeer, it doesn't just reflect — it changes color with the seasons, something no other mammal does. A perfect example of evolution shaping survival in one of the toughest environments on the planet.

Danish Hearts

The earliest known woven Christmas heart, or “julehjerte,” was crafted by the renowned Danish author Hans Christian Andersen in the 1860s. This original heart, made from yellow and green paper without a handle, is preserved at the Hans Christian Andersen Museum in Odense, Denmark. Over time, these pleated hearts have become a cherished symbol of Danish Christmas traditions.

Member Sue has a full book on these & occasionally posts on our website different patterns to make. A good Christmas craft for the family!

<https://www.ica.se/recept/ischoklad-649630/> <https://ingmar.app/.../recipe-ischoklad-swedish-ice.../> <https://www.thespeltkitchen.com/two-ingredient-swedish...>

must be one of the simplest julgodis (Christmas candies) to make. Coconut butter and chocolate so not a lot of ingredients to buy. I like making them both with dark and milk chocolates, looks pretty in the bowl or in a bag as gifts. Adding chopped nuts, crushed candy canes, coconut or dried fruit adds some texture to them and make them even more delicious. You can also make them more "grown up" by adding alcohol like Cointreau, dark rum, Kahlua, etc. Check the notes on all 3 recipe sites...good info.

Recipes (oppskrifter)

Dinner of the Month

<https://www.fjordsandbeaches.com/norwegian-christmas-food/>

Instead of a recipe this month I'm going to talk about a traditional Norwegian Christmas Dinner. Some recipes can be found at the website above or there are many other websites.

Pinnekjøtt, a savory and unique delicacy made of lamb ribs, a recent survey shows that 34% of Norway eats this at Christmas time, increasing to 69% in Western Norway. The literal translation of pinnekjøtt is "stick meat," and that name is fittingly named this because the meat is soaked in water, and later steamed together with actual wooden sticks to remove the salt. Birch sticks are preferable, and some people do get these from nature. It is traditionally served with potatoes, a broth-based gravy and nepastappa (a mash made out of root vegetables, with kohlrabi as the main ingredient).

Ribbe is a crispy pork belly with lots of "crackling" on top. In fact, an astonishing 44% of the Norwegian population eats ribbe on Christmas Eve. It's actually quite easy to make ribbe at home – just be sure to prepare it with good-quality ingredients. The key is to make sure the skin is especially crispy, whilst keeping the meat moist and chewy! Ribbe is traditionally served with red cabbage, potatoes, thick sausages (called julepølse, Christmas sausage) and medisterkaker (yummy meatballs).

Lutefisk is a very interesting dish, favored by a small percentage of the population for Christmas (around 2-3% if my research is correct). Lots of people make sure to have lutefisk at least once during the month of December. Lutefisk is a dried cod that is cured in lye, making it an acquired taste. The lutefisk is often served with boiled potatoes, melted butter, and other traditional accompaniments such as aquavit or beer. It can also be combined with various sauces and spices to give it an extra kick.

Judy's Recipe Corner

Orange Cardamom Loaf: <https://theviewfromgreatisland.com/orange-cardamom-bread-recipe/>

Ingredients

- 1 orange
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup salted butter, at room temperature
- 3 large eggs, at room temperature
- 1 tsp vanilla extract
- 1 ½ cups flour
- ¼ cup cornstarch
- 1 ½ tsp baking powder
- 1 ½ tsp ground cardamom
- 1 pinch salt
- ½ cup buttermilk

Glaze

- 1 ½ cups powdered sugar
- 3 Tbsp orange juice to thin, start with 2 tablespoons and add more as necessary

Instructions

1. Preheat oven to 350F. Lightly butter a 9x5 loaf pan and line it with parchment paper with long ends so you can lift the bread out later for glazing and slicing.
2. Wash and dry the orange. Remove the peel with a vegetable peeler. A serrated peeler works best for this. You want to remove just the orange part of the peel, with little of the bitter white pith underneath.

Instructions Continued

1. Put the sugar and orange peelings in a food processor and process until the peels are completely incorporated into the sugar. You may want to pulse as well as process to get all the chunks of peel broken down. The sugar will be pale orange, and incredibly fragrant with a moist texture similar to brown sugar. Note: do not make your orange sugar ahead of time, use right away.
2. Put the orange sugar and butter into a stand mixer and cream until light and fluffy ~ a full 5 minutes.
3. Beat in each of the eggs, one by one, making sure each egg is fully incorporated before adding the next one. Scrape down the sides of the bowl and beat in the vanilla.
4. Whisk together the flour, cornstarch, baking powder, salt and cardamom and add to the mixer, alternately with the buttermilk, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Finish mixing by hand, to make sure everything is thoroughly mixed, but don't over beat.
5. Turn the batter into the prepared pan, spread out evenly, and bake on the center rack for 55-60 minutes, or until fully risen and a toothpick inserted near the center comes out without wet batter clinging to it (moist crumbs are fine.) Ovens and pans vary so check your bread on the early side.
6. Let the bread cool in the pan for 10 minutes, then remove, using the parchment paper handles, and remove to a cooling rack.
7. Meanwhile whisk together the sugar with enough orange juice to make a thick glaze. Spread the glaze over the slightly warm or cooled bread. Wait until the glaze sets up before slicing.
